The Story:

Paid ?80 for half hour full service on a late Friday afternoon and was totally ripped off.

Charlie seemed nice enough but the service received was terrible. Charlie was disorganised from the start. She'd just arrived back at work and spent the first 10 mins getting ready.

After a short delay we began with a back massage and were getting on OK. This seemed to go on longer than expected as she moaned about how tired she was, how late she worked last night, how other punters were not very nice.

I tried to move things on and suggested I turn over. She began rubbing my front and again after a while I made subtle hints to move on with things and began to touch her and undress her - but progress was slow and there seemed a bit of reluctance to get down to business.

By the time we were about to have intercourse there was a loud bang on the door and a warning that we'd gone well over time. At this point Charlie quickly jumped off the bed to get dressed leaving me with a hard on, not even having had sex. I felt totally ripped off. Basically I had spent ?80 for no sex.

As you can imagine I wasn't happy so went downstairs to complain to the management. I did this very calmly and politely but was met by total disinterest. In fact I got the impression that Elite Retreat had little concern for my issue and condoned such behaviour. As a result I felt ripped off twice - firstly by the girl and secondly by the establishment. They said they would have a word with the girl - but this doesn't really help me does it?

I certainly won't be going back to this girl or the establishment again. Unless you like a derisory back and front rub and want to leave with a bigger hard on than when you arrived then I certainly wouldn't recommend this place.

My worst experience in about 10 years of punting that left me really annoyed throughout the weekend that followed. These sort of places give the industry a bad name.
